FESTIVAL TIME!

As spring arrives, so does the Festival. It's always a spirited time as we emerge and embrace the first sunshine. In Norwich and around Norfolk, the Festival plays its part bringing us back onto the streets, into public gardens and enticing us into nights out with friends.

The Festival kicks off with the Welcome Weekend. Explore the streets of Norwich and discover great outdoor arts for all the family. On Saturday night join us in Festival Gardens for an amazing aerial display from Gorilla Circus.

The Adnams Spiegeltent is at the heart of the Festival. This year, Le Coup transport us to a world of funfairs filled with travelling showmen and women. Late night music, great food and drink, means Festival Gardens is the place to be. There's another celebration of the written word with the City of Literature, while the adventurous will enjoy the Festival Speak Easy, a hidden new venue showcasing spoken word from the Inn Crowd.

There is a rich vein of music running through the Festival, from world-class orchestras to some of the UK's best new talent. Highlights include a residency with Solem Quartet, Rhiannon Giddens opening the Festival and The Hallé conducted by Kevin John Edusei.

It takes many partners to make a festival. Thanks to the wealth of Norwich venues and regional partners presenting Festival events and to all our funders and sponsors. Thanks also to our audiences - every ticket you buy and every donation you make helps ensure the Festival's return each spring.

CITY OF LITERATURE WEEKEND

FRIDAY 26—SUNDAY 28 MAY

City of Literature Weekend is a Norfolk & Norwich Festival and National Centre for Writing presentation, programmed by National Centre for Writing.

Holly Ainley, Head of Programmes & Creative Engagement at National Centre for Writing, invites you to join the conversation.

The idea that threads itself through this year's City of Literature weekend is the power of storytelling to spark conversation. At National Centre for Writing we believe that creative writing has not only artistic but social power: encouraging discussion, fostering an exchange of views and often changing minds.

Across this weekend, you'll find bestselling authors of fiction, non-fiction and poetry who are using their work to respond to some of the prevailing subjects today – from the natural world to art, to medicine and science. Starting conversations isn't always easy on these subjects but is vital for re-examining long-held ideas and we've tried to create opportunities to hear and learn from new voices and fresh perspectives.

Through a variety of events and writing workshops we invite you to consider love, class, grief, family ties, cultural differences, and identity. We will shine a light on current thinking around the links between the scientific world and creativity, with authors who focus on the climate crisis, who work in the medical profession and who see nature as vital to our mental health.

Our aim is for you to encounter possibilities to listen, learn, be entertained; whether you decide to watch an author interview, participate in a workshop or visit our publishing fair, we're glad you'll be joining the conversation.

The audience become 'pilgrims,' led through the village, encountering performances, actions, demonstrations and films, plus an installation by Richard Wilson. A day-long event creates a basis for shared dialogue, conviviality and reflection 'in search of the miraculous.'

'Reading Anne Bean's CV is like following a continuous performance, a continuous response to the world... a "magification" of the world. The panoply of places she has worked, times of the day or night, interiors, exteriors, seasons, publics, materials, concepts, tools, is astonishing: all shifting but all attuned to unique situations.' - Guy Brett
